

At Cornish Lithium, we understand how important our staff are to our success. As such we place a high priority on the health, safety and welfare of our staff, contractors, and associates. We commit to meeting all our legal and regulatory requirements and will strive to exceed these to develop a positive health and safety culture within our organisation, with a focus on continual improvement.

As we enter the next stage of our growth and development it essential that we maintain our focus on health and safety. We will therefore strive to identify risks at the planning and development stage and to thus minimise exposure to our staff, contractors, and associates to such risks.

We understand the importance of having the right people, with the right skills, training, experience, and competence when addressing work related tasks. We will therefore ensure that all of our staff have, or receive, appropriate health and safety training, to enable them to identify hazards and play an active role in the management of our approach to health and safety.

At Cornish Lithium, we also understand the importance of our staff's mental health and wellbeing. We commit to try to identify and address workplace stressors, as we would any other workplace hazard. We will also aid our staff in managing their own mental health and wellbeing through workplace forums and the support of an external wellbeing provider.

We commit to learning from experience, both through our own incidents, and those that occur to others. We will ensure that all our staff are aware of the importance of reporting accidents, near misses and incidents, so that we may learn from them and improve.

We will also ensure that there is regular open and structured engagement between management and our staff on health and safety issues, including regular committee meetings at both site and at company level.

We will also engage with our contractors and partners to share all relevant health and safety information and work together to ensure that all sites that we work on are safe.

We will review our health and safety management system, on at least an annual basis, to ensure that it is suitable and sufficient for our needs.

I am sure you will all agree that safety starts at home and that we are all responsible for the safety of ourselves and others around us.

15.09.23

Jeremy Wrathall
Founder & CEO